

This is a sad day indeed for the United States and our rights to Democracy. I saw the vote broadcast today on CSPAN (for which I am grateful daily). I thank Michael Copps for his tireless efforts to open the proceedings to the American public and applaud Jonathan Adelstein's courageous speech and I thank him for his courage on insisting that the truth be told. I am writing you to ask that you rethink your votes. I very much hope that citizens' groups and Congress can take action to rescind the current vote that the FCC took. It is clear that the vote does not represent the majority of American opinion.
